Kwansei Gakuin Clock Tower

Originally built in 1929 as the library for the Nishinomiya Uegahara Campus, the central clock tower now stands as a key symbol for all of Kwansei Gakuin. In 2009, it was designated as a Tangible Cultural Property by the Japanese government.

What is Kwansei Gakuin?

Founded in 1889 by the American missionary Rev. W.R. Lambuth, Kwansei Gakuin is an integrated educational institution comprising nine schools. Mastery for Service, Kwansei Gakuin's motto, is an exhortation for all university members to fully cultivate their God-given gifts so that they can use their talents to serve their neighbors, society and the world.

What is Kwansei Gakuin University?

Kwansei Gakuin University—colloquially known as Kangaku—is a private nondenominational Christian university in the Kansai region of Japan. Setting a Course for the Wider World

In 2014, Kwansei Gakuin University was chosen to take part in the Top Global University Project. As one of the institutions at the forefront of efforts to internationalize Japanese higher education, Kwansei Gakuin serves as a hub for academic exchange. During the 2018 academic year, the university sent almost 1,900 students to study abroad, and also took in more than 600 international students from over 160 overseas partner institutions.

Where is Kwansei Gakuin?

Kwansei Gakuin University's main campus is located in the city of Nishinomiya in Hyogo Prefecture, which is under an hour away from the major metropolitan areas of Kobe, Osaka and Kyoto. In addition, the university has campuses in the cities of Nishinomiya, Osaka, Sanda and Tokyo. As a comprehensive educational institution, Kwansei Gakuin also operates a kindergarten, an elementary school, a junior high school, a high school and two international schools in the Kansai region.

Nishinomiya Uegahara Campus

Kwansei Gakuin University's main campus, the Nishinomiya Uegahara Campus, is located about halfway between Kobe and Osaka in the city of Nishinomiya. Inspired by Spanish Mission Style architecture, all of the campus buildings share the same distinct color scheme, with cream-colored walls and red roofs, and the Clock Tower stands at the center of one's view when entering through the main gate.

Renowned as one of the most beautiful university campuses in the entire country, the campus has maintained the idea behind its original design layout since 1929. The Nishinomiya Uegahara Campus won a Total Design achievement award from the Architectural Institute of Japan in 2017 for successfully preserving its fundamental architecture while simultaneously modernizing and upgrading its facilities.

Two Study Tracks and a Wide Variety of Elective Courses

The Contemporary Japan Program is specially designed for incoming exchange students. Exchange students are offered a choice between two study tracks, the "Japanese Language Track" and the "Modern Japan Track" that will define the main focus of their time at KGU.

Exchange students can also select elective courses to learn more about contemporary Japan from a variety of perspectives, such as language, culture, society, economics and politics.

Homestay and Dormitory Options

KGU offers two accommodation options for exchange students: homestay and dormitory, and will do its best to place each student in an accommodation of their preference.

Classes Offered Over the Winter Intensive Period (February to March)

Exchange students who study for a full year from the Fall Semester to the Spring Semester will be enrolled in classes during the Winter Intensive Period, which takes place for approximately four weeks from February to March.

Why did you choose to study at KGU?

I came here on vacation with my family five years ago, and when I chose my exchange destination, KGU was my first choice because I really wanted to come back and experience life in Kansai. There are also a lot of programs that Kangaku offers, and when I heard from my other friends who did their study abroad at KGU, it sounded really fun.

Where are you living now?

I'm staying with a host family in Itami City. My host family is really kind and I like them a lot. They helped me with adapting to Japan, and they're understanding of my situation, and very open-minded. We always speak in Japanese too.

Did you study Japanese before you came?

I studied Japanese for two years, but I realized when I came that my level was not as proficient as other people who have studied for less time. I'm in the level 3 of the Japanese Language Track, and I think it's an appropriate level for me.

What's your favorite Japanese phrase?

"Naru hodo." ("I see.") If you get what someone's saying, you can say "naru hodo," and even if you don't get it, you can just say "naru hodo" anyway. (laughs)

Advice for you

As a KGU student, I would say to always check information so you don't miss out on things. Be as open as you can. Coming to a new country, it might be hard to make friends, and there might be cultural differences, but come with an open mind and share your experiences. Also, talk to the Japanese students, even if your Japanese isn't very good, because they will help you improve a lot. When I was in NZ, I think I wasn't proficient enough, but Japanese students at KGU have helped me so much.

[Daily schedule on class days]

13:30-18:20 Attend afternoon classes
18:20-19:30 Hang out with friends
19:30-21:30 Head back to host family's house, have dinner
21:30-23:30 Do homework, relax, get ready for bed

Big Mama

How will you take what you've learned here and apply it towards your future goals?

Since I'm doing a double degree for Law and Cultural Studies/Japanese, I've always wanted to be an immigration officer in an embassy. When I go back to NZ, I want to either work in the immigration sector or in the embassy helping NZ-Japan relations. In my city, Christchurch, we used to have a lot of Japanese people living there, but after the earthquake, many people left. Now Christchurch is rebuilding, so I want to help promote New Zealand and get Japanese people to come and visit.

Why did you choose KGU?

I wanted to escape the crowds in Surabaya, the second largest city in Indonesia, and enjoy daily peaceful life. That's why I chose to go to Nishinomiyai. Also, when I looked for KGU on the Internet, I was surprised to see that it was quite high on the university rankings in Japan, even compared to universities in Tokyo.

How are classes in the Modern Japan Track?

At my home university, I'm taking International Business Management, so I'm taking classes like international economics and management, but here we do more about analyzing business-government relationships, how history affects culture, stuff like that. It's more about increasing knowledge, rather than skills.

How will you take what you've learned here at KGU and apply it towards your future goals?

Here at KGU, most of the things I learned were about Japan in terms of politics and government relations. As someone studying business management, it was really useful because we didn't learn much about Japan specifically back in Indonesia, it was more of a global focus. Integrating all of this knowledge will be useful, not just for implementing them in a management sense, but for innovating with businesses in Indonesia, and continuing to improve myself.

I live in a dorm for Japanese students.

When I'm not doing my assignments in the library, I hang out in the Global Lounge with my friends.

I'm Catholic, so on Sundays I go to church.

I go around the city by myself or with friends.

Advice for you

Learn some of the language. Life here is really short, so work to make friends. You want to maximize your time here in Japan, not just to have people to talk to, but to form strong relationships even after your time here is over.

[Daily schedule on class days]

9:00 Get up
9:00-10:30 Take a bath, do laundry, eat breakfast, get ready for school, head to campus
11:10-12:40 Go to morning class
12:40-13:30 Eat lunch at Big Papa
13:30-18:20 Go to afternoon classes, hang out with friends on campus
18:20-20:30 Do homework in the library, attend GS events if there are any happening
20:30-22:30 Eat dinner, head back to the dorm
22:30-00:30 Relax at the dorm, get ready for bed

Big Papa has really great food. The menu is different every day, so there's always this mysterious feeling, like, "Oh, there's something new!"
